UNDERGRADUATE STUDENT LOAN PROGRAMS

FEDERAL STUDENT LOANS

All federal student loan programs require annual filing of the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) to determine eligibility. In general, a student must be degree seeking and enrolled at least half-time to be eligible to borrow federal student loan aid.

Types of Loans

Federal Direct Loans: Students who meet general eligibility requirements may borrow Federal Direct Loans. Federal regulations limit the annual and aggregate loan amounts available. Direct loans have an origination fee of 1.073% thru 10/01/15 (1.068% thru 10/01/16) and a fixed interest rate of 4.29% (thru 07/01/16). Undergraduate students who demonstrate need are eligible for subsidized direct loans, for which the federal government will pay the loan’s interest while the student is enrolled at least half-time. Unsubsidized loans start to accumulate interest as soon as they are disbursed. Loans under this program have a 6 month grace period. A grace period is the amount of time students have after graduation or falling below half-time enrollment before they must begin repayment.

Federal Perkins Loans: This is a limited funded subsidized federal loan program with a fixed 5% interest rate and 9 month grace period. This program is designed to provide additional loan aid to the neediest students.

Federal Parent Loan for Undergraduate Students (PLUS): This unsubsidized federal loan program allows a parent (or step-parent) to take out an educational loan in his or her own name for their student’s benefit. PLUS Loans have an origination fee of 4.292% thru 10/01/15 (4.272% thru 10/01/16) and a fixed interest rate of 6.84% (thru 07/01/16). Unlike the Perkins loan and Direct Loan programs available to the student-borrower, the PLUS program requires a separate application (online at studentloans.gov) as well as a credit check. PLUS loans cannot be consolidated with the student-borrower’s debt.

Federal Loan Repayment Information

While federal student loans are issued by the US Department of Education, your repayment will be managed by one of several loan servicer companies. To determine your loan servicer, visit studentaid.ed.gov to view information about all of the federal student loans you have received and to find contact information for the loan servicer or lender for your loans. Students may wish to request federal loan consolidation to combine all their federal loan debt (excluding Parent PLUS Loans) into a single loan to make managing repayment easier. For details, see https://studentaid.ed.gov/sa/repay-loans/consolidation.

In the event of death or permanent disability of the student, all federal student loans are forgiven including any Parent PLUS Loans.

There are multiple repayment plans available to fit your income and living situation. Information on each of the plans is available at studentaid.ed.gov/sa/repay-loans/understand/repayment-plans. To estimate your federal student loan repayment options, check out the Federal Student Aid Repayment Estimator available at the website above. This tool estimates monthly payments based on the selected repayment plan and loan debt.

- Use real loan data. The Repayment Estimator will work best if you provide complete and accurate information, and the tool will calculate repayment information based on the type of loans you have borrowed, the amount of each loan, and the interest rate for each loan. There are two ways to do this:
  - Log in with your FSAID so that the Repayment Estimator can load that data.
  - Access your full student loan history by logging into the National Student Loan Database System (NSLDS).
- Use accurate income information. If you’re entering income information without knowing exactly what your income will be after graduation, use resources such as the Bureau of Labor Statistics (bLS.gov) to estimate your anticipated income realistically or take advantage of the University Career Center (career.ku.edu) to explore career options.
- Account for everything. If you’ve borrowed private loans, be sure to include them your plans. They won’t be reflected in the borrowing history you access from the Department of Education.

Always communicate with your servicer when facing financial trouble or if you are in need of assistance. If you are facing a financial hardship, you can apply for a forbearance to temporarily suspend repayment without going into collections or damaging your credit. If you’re having trouble with your loan servicer, the Federal Student Aid Ombudsman may be able to help at studentaid.ed.gov/sa/repay-loans/disputes/prepare/contact-ombudsman.

Public Service Loan Forgiveness: The PSLF program is designed to reward students for electing to work in public benefit positions which may provide lower earning potential than similar roles available in the private sector. Students may qualify for forgiveness of the remaining balance of their Federal Direct student loans after making 120 qualifying payments while employed full-time by a government organization (including a federal, state, local, or tribal organization, agency, or entity; a public child or family service agency; or a tribal college or university) or non-profit 501(c)(3) organization. Other private, non-profit organizations (which are not a labor union or partisan political organization) may also qualify. NOTE: In general, only borrowers who are making reduced monthly payments through the Income Based Repayment, Pay As You Earn, or Income Contingent Repayment plans will have a remaining balance after making 120 payments. KU ENDOWMENT ASSOCIATION LOANS

KUEA Loans, featuring a fixed 5% interest rate and 4 month grace period, are available exclusively to KU students through the KU Endowment Association. To be eligible, returning KU students must have a 2.0+ KU GPA, transfer students must have a 2.5+ transfer GPA, and incoming freshmen must have a high school GPA of 3.0+. Student borrowers making less than $25,000 per year must also have a co-signer, but no credit check is required. For details, review the KU Endowment Association Loan Program information sheet on affordability.ku.edu/forms.

- Hardship Forbearance: Borrowers may apply for a one-time forbearance for up to six months. Interest will continue to accrue during the forbearance period.
- Residency/Internship/Fellowship Deferment: Borrowers may request deferment of their loan payments while participating in a qualifying residency, internship, or fellowship program. Interest will continue to accrue during the deferment period. Deferment is not available for enrollment at another institution besides the University of Kansas.
- Reduced Payment Request: Borrowers may apply for up to 12 months of reduced payment based on financial hardship.

For full details on all repayment, deferment, and forbearance options visit kuendowment.org, select “student loans” via the top menu, and then “Already have a loan?” on the left menu.

PRIVATE or ALTERNATIVE LOANS

Borrower eligibility and repayment terms for private or alternative student loans vary widely from lender to lender. Most require student-borrowers to be credit-worthy (or have a credit-worthy co-signer) and at least half-time enrollment. Interest rates may be variable and the debt is often transferable upon death or disability of the borrower to the co-signer. In general, students are advised to exhaust their federal student loan and KU Endowment Association Loan eligibility before seeking alternative student loan aid.

Under federal law, KU Financial Aid and Scholarships staff are barred from advising students on using any particular private lender in preference to another. An information sheet on alternative loans which includes a list of private lenders previously used by KU students is available at affordability.ku.edu/forms.
